

Measuring My Vision for Greater Missions Impact

Much about your current missions approach may be excellent, and you will want to retain productive elements. But you may also feel that your present program is inadequately moving your global involvement forward with sufficient energy and excitement.

The comments below represent the feedback from various congregations. Check those that represent your personal perception of your church's current situation.

- I see lots of untapped gifts in our congregation. I believe we could unleash far more resources (expertise, time, etc.) for God to use to expand His Kingdom.
- I long for our church to connect more significantly with our brothers and sisters around the globe. I am excited about the explosion of the church worldwide and want to see us experience greater community with the larger body of Christ.
- I want to see our entire congregation infected with missions passion. Currently a small group of people are involved, but the majority of the congregation seems apathetic.
- Our younger generations need to be challenged about global opportunities in a way that speaks to them. Too many of our young adults don't seem to relate to our current approach to missions and missionary service.
- We are spread too thin. Our congregation and leaders can't keep up with what is going on in so many places, or care in-depth for workers scattered in so many ministries and locations.
- We need a better way to measure which missions involvements are truly strategic and effective. How do we decide where and how to get involved?
- I believe our church needs stronger personal connections to what we support. Too often our involvement goes little further than writing a check.
- I would like our church to have a way to measure the effectiveness of our short-term teams. I also want to see more lasting impact on those who go.
- I want our church to become a congregation that prays with greater passion.
- I believe our church's giving to missions could increase substantially.
